

C H E S H I R E.

THIS is a maritime county, distinguished in its figure by the two horns which project to the east and west of its northern side. It is bounded on the north by a small part of the county of York, and by the rivers Mersey and Tame, which separate it from Lancashire; on the east by the counties of Derby and Stafford; on the south by Shropshire and a detached part of Flintshire, and the estuary of the Dee; and on the north-west by the Irish Sea. From north to south it extends about thirty miles; its extreme breadth from horn to horn almost sixty, but across its middle part not more than forty; in circumference it is two hundred miles, containing 705,498 statute acres. In size, Cheshire ranks as the nineteenth English county, and in population as the ninth.

N A M E AND EARLY HISTORY.—The name is a contraction of Chestershire. At the time of the Roman invasion, Cheshire formed part of the territory occupied by the Cornovii. In the first division of Briton by the Romans it was included in Britannia Superior; and of the British territory remained free from it until the year 60^t, when the defeat of the Britons by Ethelfred, King of Northumbria, rendered so memorable by the subsequent massacre of the monks of Bangor, took place here. Upon the division of England into three great districts by Alfred, Cheshire was included in that called Mercenia, or the Mercian jurisdiction. From this period until the rebuilding of Chester, which had been destroyed by the Danes, and the erection of several fortresses, nothing remarkable occurred until the year 981, when the coast was laid waste by pirates. In the reign of William the Conqueror, Cheshire acquired the privileges of a County Palatine; that sovereign having granted to his nephew, Hugh d'Avranches, commonly called Hugh Lupus, the whole county to hold as freely by the sword as he himself held the kingdom of England by the Crown. The military transactions of Cheshire abound in interest. For two centuries after the conquest by William, the county was disturbed by the inroads of the Welsh, and grievous were its sufferings during that border warfare. During this time the city of Chester was the usual place of rendezvous for the English army, and all that part of the county bordering on Wales suffered much, not only from the ravages of the enemy, but from the destruction caused, at intervals, by the command of the English Sovereigns, to prevent the Welsh being benefited by plunder. The only event recorded as worthy of notice in the baronial wars during the reigns of John and Henry III. is the capture of Chester, in 1264. Soon after, Henry, Earl of Lancaster, appeared in arms against Richard II. and having received encouragement from the citizens and others in the county, he came to Chester, where he tarried several days, mustering his army beneath the city walls. A few years afterwards the inhabitants of Cheshire took part in the rebellion of the Percies, the result of which was particularly disastrous to them; for a great number of the knights and squires of the county, together with many retainers, were slain in the decisive battle of Shrewsbury, July 22nd, 1403. From this period to the fierce contest between Charles I. and the Parliament, the interruptions to the peace of the county were few and of short duration; but in this memorable struggle most of the towns declared for Charles, and many were the sanguinary conflicts that took place; one of these, the battle of Rowton, near Chester, on the 24th of September, 1645, when the royal forces were defeated, was witnessed by the King himself, from the Phoenix tower on the walls of the city; the garrison of which, after a vigorous and obstinate defence under Lord Byron, surrendered to Cromwell, on the third of February of the succeeding year. When the Royalists in the north made an attempt to restore the King, in May, 1648, the gentlemen of Cheshire, in the interest of Parliament, fortified the castle and city of Chester, for which they received the thanks of that body. During the months of June and July, 1655, many of the principal gentry were sent prisoners to the Castle of Chester, on suspicion of being disaffected to Cromwell's government. In August, 1659, Sir George Booth, who had a commission from Charles II. appointing him commander-in-chief of all his forces in Cheshire, Lancashire, and North Wales, appeared in arms at the head of a force of three thousand men, accompanied by the Earl of Derby, and several other noblemen. They mustered upon Rivington Heath, and on the 16th of August General Lambert, with a parliamentary force, met those under Sir George Booth, at Winnington Bridge, near Northwich, when a battle ensued, in which the Royalist troops were speedily defeated. After the engagement, Lambert marched to Chester, which was immediately surrendered by Colonel Croxton, the governor, when, to punish the citizens for their defection, Parliament passed a vote in September of the same year dissolving the Corporation of that city, and depriving the latter of its independent jurisdiction. In the rebellion of 1745, the Pretender led his forces through Cheshire on his route to Derby; but on the approach of the Duke of Cumberland he rapidly retraced his steps. Without the walls of the city of Chester, this county contains few relics of ancient days, but within the city antiquities abound; conspicuously amongst them rises the venerable cathedral, of which due notice will be taken in the description of the city.

S O I L AND AGRICULTURAL PRODUCE.—From the Government Blue Book for 1882, the following was the condition of the county viz.:—Corn crops, 83,094 acres; green crops, 88,929 acres; clover and under rotation, 55,497 acres; grass not broken (exclusive of heath land), 860,380 acres; uncropped arable land, 1,405 acres, making a total of 532,705 acres under crops, fallow and grass. The county also had 1,943 acres under orchards, 1,341 acres in market gardens, 515 acres in nursery grounds, and 20,182 acres of woods, coppices and plantations. In the year 1768 one thousand four hundred acres of land were recovered from the sea; six hundred and sixty-four acres in 1769, and in 1795 three hundred and forty-eight. The soil of the county, generally speaking, is composed of clay and sand, the former prevailing in the hundreds of Broxton, Wirral, and Macclesfield; the latter in the hundreds of Eddisbury, Northwich, Nantwich, and Bucklow. Large tracts of peat moss and black moor land exhibit themselves in that part which lies upon the confines of Yorkshire and Derbyshire. The general appearance of the county is that of an extended plain, and is for the most part a flat country, whence it has obtained the name of "Vale Royal of England." Although the surface of Cheshire is stated to be characteristically level, many parts possess high claims to the notice of the artist and admirer of diversified scenery, and from the prominences may be contemplated nature clothed both in magnificent and simple garbs. Wirral boasts many delightful marine views; the prospect of the Welsh coast, from Parkgate and its neighbourhood, is interesting, and includes the venerable ruins of Flint Castle, the towns of Flint, Holywell, &c.; while the active scenery, produced from vessels in the coasting and coal trades continually passing to and fro, gives a lively and pleasing colouring to the picture. The vicinities of Macclesfield, Astbury, Nantwich, Sandbach, Bunhill, Kelsall Hill, and from the summit of Beeston, afford prospects extensive and luxuriant. The view from Halton is also very wide, enriched by the meanderings of the Mersey, and the eye is carried over a large district of Lancashire. From Beeston, the Vale Royal is seen in all its beauty, highly cultivated and spotted with woods and coppices; in the distance are the towering Welsh mountains, and the estuary of the Dee gives a pleasing perspective to the whole. Alderley Edge, near the line of the London and North-Western railway, is a lofty eminence, commanding extensive views, and is much resorted to by parties from a considerable distance. Some centuries ago Cheshire was celebrated for the great extent of its forests and heath lands. Its principal forests were Delamere (or More) and Mondrum, Wirral and Macclesfield; all of them well supplied with timber. The Forest of Delamere was of great extent, not fewer than fifty townships having been within its boundary; within the last two centuries it contained upwards of eleven thousand acres, the soil consisting chiefly of gravel and white sand. Two thousand acres were enclosed, pursuant to an Act of Parliament passed in 1812, and the soil now sustains thriving plantations of various timber. This county is considered one of the finest grazing districts in England. The cheese in Cheshire has long been celebrated, and is in much request all over the United Kingdom, and great quantities are annually exported to America and Europe. The large towns, such as Liverpool, Manchester, Birkenhead, &c., and even London, are supplied to a great extent with milk from the dairies of this shire, the trade in which has become even more profitable in many instances than cheese making. The other productions of this prolific county are potates (which are cultivated to much advantage), corn, millstones, timber, &c. Cheshire has ever been classed amongst the counties of England that boast a salubrious climate; not any particular disease is known to prevail in it; and although subterranean labour employs a great number of its inhabitants, instances of extreme longevity are as numerous as in other healthful counties of a like population.

M A N U F A C T U R E S AND MINERALS.—The manufactures of Cheshire are very extensive and important in their character, the cotton trade and the introduction of machinery having combined to raise it to a station of consequence amongst the manufacturing counties of England. Stockport, a populous and flourishing town, participates largely in all branches of the cotton trade and the making of hats; Macclesfield and Congleton have numerous silk factories; at Euxton soap and chemicals are extensively manufactured; while Sandbach and Nantwich are each noted for the making of boots and shoes. The building of iron ships of very large tonnage is now the chief industry of Birkenhead, and Crewe is renowned for the construction of railway carriages and locomotive engines, the great engineering works of the London and North-Western Railway Company being situated here. The veins of metal which have been discovered and worked in this county are those of copper and lead, at Alderley Edge, where also is found cobalt; lead and copper ores have likewise produced profit from the mines at Nottram; and those metals, as well as iron ore have been found in the parts, though in veins not rich enough to inspire speculation. Coal is found in great plenty in numerous parts of the county, there being about thirty-nine collieries at work, which altogether raise about 530,000 tons of coal annually. From Mr. Dickenson's (Her Majesty's Inspector of Mines) estimate in 1871, there were about two hundred million tons remaining to be extracted. Beds of salt have long been known to exist beneath the towns of Northwich, Winsford, Middlewich, Sandbach, Lawton, Nantwich, &c. A bed of rock-salt was discovered in 1670 during a boring for coal, at a depth of 120 feet, and 75 feet in thickness. About a century ago, an agent of the Duke of Bridgewater's bored 30 feet below the upper salt bed and struck another bed of salt, which turned out to be from 90 to 120 feet thick, and part of this is now mined at Northwich, where the effects of the removal of thick masses of rock from below have shewn themselves by the gradual sinking of the surface, so that houses have to be rebuilt or removed, and some have been almost entirely submerged, and quite a lake has been formed in one place where the subsidence has been large. The various meres or lakes about the county are supposed to have been formed in the pits or holes left by subsidence after the extraction of salt. The returns for 1881-2 shew that there were conveyed for general and export trade, 1,123,786 tons of white salt, and 55,799 tons of rock salt. The principal pits are at Anderton, Marston, Northwich, Lawton, Whealock, Wincham, Winnington, Winsford, and Witton. At Nantwich there is still a brine spring, which is now utilized for the purpose of a saline bath, having been found very efficacious in rheumatic cases.

RIVERS, CANALS AND RAILWAYS.—The principal rivers of Cheshire are the Dee, the Mersey, the Weaver, the Dane, the Bollin, the Peover, the Whealock and the Tame. Besides these, there are other inconsiderable streams, which either rise or wash the lands of this county, and are tributary waters to the other rivers. Cheshire contains many sheets of water, called meres, lakes and pools; among these is the noble Combermere, more than a mile in length, giving name to Combermere Abbey; Chapel and Moss meres are fine pieces of water, in front of Cholmondeley Castle; the other meres are Bar-mere, Quoisley-mere, Rostherne-mere, Bag-mere, Pick-mere, Oak-mere, Mere-pool, &c.—The principal canals which benefit this county are—the Duke of Bridgewater's, commenced in 1761, the communication between Manchester and Liverpool opened in 1772, and the whole finished in 1776; the Grand Trunk Canal, the Act for cutting which was passed in 1776; the Ellesmere Canal, the Act obtained in 1793; the Chester and Nantwich Canal (now united with the Ellesmere), obtained its Act in 1772, and was completed in 1776; and the Peak Forest Canal, which obtained the sanction of Government in 1794; from the latter a branch was opened in November, 1881, communicating with the Mersey Canal at Lawton. These grand works of labour and art afford uninterrupted and cheap intercourse between the towns of Chester, Liverpool, Manchester, &c., besides communicating with the North of England, Staffordshire, Shropshire, and adjacent counties.—The railway communication throughout the county is most extensive, both Chester and Crewe being extensive junctions for several important lines. The main lines are—the London and North-Western, the Great Western, or Chester and Shrewsbury, the North Staffordshire, the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire jointly with the Midland, the Manchester, South Junction and Altringham, the Cheshire Lines Committee, and the Chester and Holyhead, and many branches.

ECCLÉSIASTICAL AND CIVIL DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &c.—By the term of the grant made to Hugh Lupus, when his uncle, the Conqueror, conveyed to him the County Palatine of Chester, as before mentioned, the representative of the former was constituted the first hereditary Earl in England; and he acquired also jura regalia within the county, in the exercise of which he created eight parliamentary barons. His descendants continued in the possession of this dignity until 1237, when John Earl of Chester dying without issue, Henry the Third seized upon Cheshire, giving other lands in lieu of it to the deceased Earl's sisters; his own son, Prince Edward, received the Earldom of Chester. Richard the Second, when he erected this county into a principality, styled himself Principes Cestræc. This act being annulled by his successor, Cheshire again became a County Palatine. Henry the Eighth abridged the privileges of this County Palatine considerably. In consequence of this curtailment, the county petitioned to send knights and burgesses to parliament, which prayer was granted, and in 1542 an act was passed authorising two knights to be returned for the county and two burgesses for the city of Chester. The Assizes and the Epiphany and Midsummer Quarter Sessions for the county are held at Chester Castle, and the Easter and Michaelmas Quarter Sessions at Knutsford, at which latter town is the Government prison, capable of accommodating seven hundred prisoners, and which is ranked as one of the most perfect prisons in the country. There is also a small portion of the old gaol at Chester Castle retained by the Government for prisoners on short sentences and those awaiting their trial, but the principal part of the old prison is now used as a military prison. The county is in the province of York, and now alone constitutes the diocese of Chester since the erection of Liverpool into a bishopric two years ago. The old diocese was formerly very extensive, comprising, as it did, the whole of this county, the whole of Lancashire as far as the Shap Fells of Westmoreland, a large portion of Yorkshire, and parts of Flintshire and Denbighshire, in North Wales. The now limited diocese is divided into two Arch-deanories (Chester and Macclesfield), these being sub-divided, for the purposes of administration, into ten rural deaneries, viz.:—Chester, Frodsham, Malpas, Middlewich, Nantwich, Wirral, Bowdon, Congleton, Macclesfield and Stockport. Its benefices are 225, and the number of parochial clergy is 836. There are not a large number of parishes, for the single townships do not constitute parishes as in the south of England, but many townships are united for ecclesiastical purposes as a parish. The largest parishes are those of Astbury, Bebington, Bowdon, Great Budworth, Cheadle, Congleton, Mottram, Prestbury, Runcorn, Stockport, Sandbach, and Wallasey. The ancient cathedral of Chester is now exclusively the cathedral of the county and the city of Chester, which latter is a county of itself. The county has a separate court of quarter sessions, and is divided into seven hundreds, viz.:—Broxton, Bucklow, Eddisbury, Macclesfield, Nantwich, Northwich, and Wirral; fourteen petty sessional divisions:—Altringham, Broxton, Bucklow, Chester Castle, Daresbury, Eddisbury, Hyde, Littlewich, Nantwich, Northwich, Prestbury, Runcorn, Stockport and Wirral; ten police districts:—Broxton, Altringham, Eddisbury, Nantwich, Northwich, Wirral, Hyde, Prestbury, Stockport and Runcorn; twelve highway board districts:—Audlem, East Broxton, West Broxton, East Bucklow, Daresbury, East Eddisbury, West Eddisbury, Nantwich, Northwich, Prestbury, Stockport and Hyde, and Wirral; and eleven sub-lieutenancy divisions:—Broxton, Bucklow-Daresbury, East Bucklow, Eddisbury, Macclesfield-Hyde, Macclesfield-Prestbury, Macclesfield-Stockport, Nantwich, Northwich, Higher Wirral, and Lower Wirral. The city of Chester is a sub-lieutenancy division of itself. There are 492 civil townships, 11 poor law unions, 10 registry districts, 6 municipal boroughs (Birkenhead, Congleton, Crewe, Hyde, Macclesfield, and Stockport). Over is a borougn under a very old charter, and annually elects a mayor. There are also 85 urban and 11 rural sanitary authorities. The county constabulary is managed by a chief constable and eleven superintendents, one of whom acts as deputy chief constable, and another as chief clerk. The present chief constable is Lieutenant-Colonel John Henry Hamersley, whose head-quarters are at Chester; deputy chief constable, Lieutenant-Colonel George H. Cope, Stockport; chief clerk, Mr. G. E. Oldmeadow, Chester. The following are the public officers for the county:—Charles William Potts, Esq., clerk of the peace, Chester; Thomas Roberts, Esq. deputy clerk of the peace, Chester; Charles Townshend, Esq. treasurer, Chester; Henry Lister Reade, Esq. clerk of indictments, Congleton; Stanhope Bull, Esq. surveyor, Chester; John Tomlinson, Esq. auditor, Sandbach. The following are the coroners for the several districts named:—F. W. Johnson, Esq. Stockport, for Stockport district; H. C. Yates, Esq. Macclesfield, for Knutsford district; H. Charlton, Esq. Chester, for Chester district; T. J. Ridgway, Esq. Warrington, for the honour and fee of Halton; and J. Tatlock, Esq. Chester, for the county of the city of Chester. The Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum is His Grace the Duke of Westminster, &c. Eaton Hall, Chester; Arthur Hugh Smith-Barry, Esq. of Marbury Hall, Northwich, is high sheriff; John Leigh Trafford, Esq. under sheriff; and John Tatlock, Esq. acting under sheriff. The Reform Bill of 1862 conferred the elective franchise upon Macclesfield and Stockport, which return two members each (the writ for the former borough, however, being for the present suspended), besides two additional ones being given to the county, so that the whole shire sent ten representatives to Parliament instead of four, as heretofore. The Reform Act of 1885 added two more members to the county, and created Birkenhead into a borough, with the privilege of returning one member. The county is now divided into three divisions, viz., East, West, and Mid, two members being returned for each, the county and boroughs now sending altogether thirteen representatives. Stalybridge, partly in Cheshire, also returning one. The gentlemen now sitting are: For East Cheshire, W. J. Legh, Esq. and W. C. Brooks, Esq.; for West Cheshire, the Hon. W. F. Tollemache and H. J. Tollemache, Esq.; for Mid Cheshire, Pier Egerton-Warburton, Esq. and the Hon. Alan de Tatton Egerton. The polling places pursuant to the Ballot Act are—For East Cheshire: Bollington, Bradbury, Cheadle, Disley, Dukinfield, Marple, Macclesfield, Mottram-in-Longdendale, Siddington, Hazel Grove, Hyde, Macclesfield, Stockport, Whaley Bridge, and Wilmslow; for Mid Cheshire: Altringham, Congleton, Grappenhall, Holmes Chapel, Knutsford, Lymm, Middlewich, Northwich, Odd Rode, Runcorn, Sandbach, Sale, Wharton, and Whitley; for West Cheshire: Alsager, Birkenhead, Crewe, Audlem, Chester, Dunham-o'-the-Hill, Frodsham, Handley, Liscard, Malpas, Nantwich, Neston, Over, Great Sutton, Tarporley, Upton (near Birkenhead), Weaverham, and Wrenbury.

Fairs.—Important cattle fairs are held periodically at Altringham, Birkenhead, Chester, Congleton, Crewe, Middlewich, Nantwich, Northwich, Sandbach, Stalybridge, Stockport, Tattonhall, & Winsford.

ACTON or ACTON is a township, village, and considerable parish, the latter comprising the townships of ACTON, ASTERSON, BADDINGTON, BRINDLEY, FADDILEY, HENHULL, HURLESTON, STOKE, and part of POUND; is distant one mile w. from Nantwich, five w.s.w. from Crewe, and 18 s.e. from Chester. The Shropshire Union Canal passes through the parish. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome building of red sandstone, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, and tower, with a clock and peal of six bells. The church is of great antiquity. In a deed of endowment dated 1285, Nantwich church is stated as a dependent chapel upon this foundation. The tower was much injured by a storm in 1757, which, with the interior of the church, was repaired at great expense. Several monuments to the members of the Wilbraham family are in the chancel and other parts of the edifice. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of Lord Tollemache, of Helmingham, and the present incumbent is the Rev. Robert Scarr Redfern, M.A. A grammar school, founded in 1662, with a small endowment and residence for the master, and a school upon the National plan, are in the village.

WORLESTON, a township and ecclesiastical parish formed from the parish of Acton, comprises the township of ASTON-JUXTA-MONDRUM, POOLE and CHOLMONDESTONE, and is distant three miles north from Nantwich. The church, a plain stone structure, was built by subscription in 1872, and consists of nave and transepts; in the interior is a beautiful stained glass window in memory of Bishop Cotton, who was drowned in the river Ganges, India. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of H. R. Tomkinson, Esq. There is also a Primitive Methodist chapel. Population in 1881, 332.

WITH AGDEN, ASHLEY, BAGULEY, BOLLINGTON, BOWDON, CARRINGTON, DUNHAM MASSEY, HALE, HEATLEY, LYMM, PARTINGTON, PEEL CAUSEWAY, RINGWAY, STATHAM, TIMPERLEY, WARBURTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ALTRINCHAM is a respectable and clean market town, late Earl of Stamford and Warrington. It is built of stone, and gives its name to the poor law union of which it forms with tower and spire. The other places of worship, with a part. It is in the parish of Bowdon, hundred of Bucklow, their localities and ministers, will be found in a subsequent 30 miles N.E. from Chester, 7 N.E. from Knutsford, and 8 S.W. page. A British school was erected near Ashley road in from Manchester; situated on the line of the South Junction railway, in a dry and remarkably healthy locality; whilst the there are schools for instructing the humbler classes of views on the high grounds about Bowdon are extensive and pleasing. Dunham Park is the finest seat in the neighbourhood, but there are many handsome residences that border the town, the gardens of which display great taste. The Duke of Bridgewater's canal passes by the Broadheath entrance to the town, on which packets constantly ply between Manchester, Runcorn and Liverpool, for the conveyance of goods. The Unicorn Hotel has a very commodious bowling green, and affords every accommodation for commercial men. The labouring class are principally occupied in agricultural and building operations, and the many market gardens in the district supply the Manchester markets with a large amount of produce. Hamon de Massey, in the time of Edward I granted many privileges to the inhabitants of the town; amongst others a guild mercatory, or Society of Free Traffic, with freedom from tolls throughout the barony, &c. A court leet is held by the Earl of Stamford who is lord of the manor; the chief officer is styled "mayor," but does not exercise any magisterial functions. The Market Hall and Town Hall were erected in 1849, by the late Earl of Stamford and Warrington. It is a brick structure with stone facings, and has a clock and bell turret, in the upper part of which is a lantern with pillars, and arches supporting a copula. The assembly room measures 66 feet by 30 feet. The new Market Hall is a fine building, situated at the top of Shaw's lane, the principal entrance facing Market street. Petty sessions are held twice a month, and the Commissioners of Inland Revenue meet at stated periods. Altrincham is included in the seventh circuit of towns under the County Court Acts, for the recovery of debts not exceeding £50. St. George's Church is of brick, erected by subscription in 1799; it corresponds in neatness with the town, which is marked by an air of quiet comfort and respectability. The living of Altrincham is in the gift of the vicar of Bowdon. St. John's Church, Ashley road, is a handsome and commodious building, erected by public subscription in 1866, the site of which was given by the its tower the views are extensive and highly picturesque, the land being in a fine state of cultivation, and richly embellished with wood. Several handsome monuments adorn the church, those to members of the Warrington family may be particularly noticed. The living of Bowdon is a vicarage, in the gift of the Bishop of Chester. A grammar school was founded here in 1600, and the school house was re-built in 1670, and again in 1806, but it is now merged in the parochial schools. There are some well endowed schools, and others for gratuitous instruction in different parts of the parish, which are noticed in their place in the Directory. The soil throughout the parish is principally of a light and sandy nature, peculiarly favourable to the growth of the potato, large quantities of which were formerly produced.

PEEL CAUSEWAY, a station on the Cheshire Midland railway, is about three-quarters of a mile south-east from Bowdon. It is a rapidly improving neighbourhood, the opening of the railway having had the effect of stimulating building.

DUNHAM MASSEY is a chapelry, township, and village, in Bowdon parish, the village being about two miles south-west from Altrincham, and separated from that of Bowdon by Dunham Park, which, with the mansion, are objects of great attraction in this neighbourhood. The Hall, re-built in 1730, is a large brick building, of quadrangular form, The parks, which abound with fine lofty timber, furnish pasture for numerous deer. The grounds are much frequented by parties from Manchester and its neighbourhood in the summer, and afford a delightful recreation to the pent up citizen. The late Earl of Stamford and Warrington erected a new church in 1855; it is dedicated to St. Margaret. The building is of stone, and the style of architecture of the 15th century. The same nobleman also granted a site in the village whereon a neat Gothic church was erected in 1864, at a cost of £1,500, raised by the public; the living is a curacy attached to Bowdon. The township is 3,470 acres in extent, and comprises the village of DUNHAM, and the hamlets of WOODHUSES, SUNDERLAND, and OLDFIELD.

BAGULEY, a township and straggling village in the parish of Bowdon, is $\frac{3}{4}$ miles n.e. from Altrincham. Thomas W. Tatton, Esq., is lord of the manor. The places of worship are Baptist and Independent chapels. Baguley Hall, now a farm house, is a fine old building of oak and wicker work; in the interior are some good specimens of old oak carving.

TIMPERLEY is a township, chapelry, and village, likewise in the parish of Bowdon, 2 miles n.e. from Altrincham, and forms part of the Dunham estates. Timperley Hall is a handsome building, and its situation remarkably pleasant. In September, 1849, was opened a new church for this district, which was enlarged in 1865; it is a handsome edifice of stone, dedicated to Christ. The Wesleyans have also a chapel here. A line of railway from Stockport passes through Timperley, and is connected with the Warrington line, which lessens the distance to Liverpool. Acreage, 1,628.

HALE is a township in Bowdon parish, adjoining Altrincham, from which town the hamlet of HALE BARNES is distant about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles s.e. The Earl of Stamford is lord of the manor. At RINGWAY, a hamlet about a mile further from Altrincham, is a chapel of ease, erected in 1720, by Lord Crewe; the living is a perpetual curacy, of which Lord Egerton is the patron. The township contains 3,679 acres.

ASHTON is a township and village in Bowdon parish, between 2 and 3 miles s. from Altrincham, situated on the verge of Tatton Park. There is a station on the Cheshire Midland line here. Lord Egerton is lord of the manor

Ashley Hall, an ancient manorial mansion, is worthy of notice as containing portraits of certain influential gentlemen of the county, who, in 1715, formed a club favourable to the designs of the Pretender; Thomas Assheton, Esq. the then owner of the manor, deciding, however, against the expediency of joining the standard of revolt, the enterprise was abandoned. A neat little church and schoolroom were erected by the late Lord Egerton in the village; the living is a curacy, attached to Bowdon. A chapel for Wesleyan Methodists is in the township.

BOLLINGTON is a township partly in the parish of Bowdon, but chiefly in that of Rostherne, about 2 miles s.w. from Bowdon. The Earl of Stamford is lord of the manor. The chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a neat Gothic edifice, erected in 1854; the living is a curacy, annexed to Rostherne. Acreage 631.

ADDEY is a small township adjoining Bollington, partly in the parish of Bowdon, and partly in that of Rostherne, 4 miles s.w. from Bowdon. Sir John L. Chetwode, Bart. is lord of the manor. Acreage, 520.

CARRINGTON is a township, village, and chapelry in the parish of Bowdon, about 5 miles n.w. from Altrincham, possessed by the Earl of Stamford, who also presents to the living, which is a perpetual curacy. The chapel of ease of St. George is a small brick edifice, erected in 1750, by George, Earl of Stamford and Warrington. A National school adjoins the chapel. The township comprises 2,333 acres.

PARTINGTON is a township and village, in the parish of Bowdon, about 5 miles n.w. from Altrincham. There are in the township places of worship for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists and Independents. There are 803 acres in the township.

WARBURTON is a parish and village, the latter about 5 miles w. from Altrincham. The estates are possessed by the Warburtons, of Arley Hall, who hold courts leet and baron for the manor, and present to the living of the parish. The church of St. Werburgh, which stands on the banks of the Mersey, is one of early date, and of very ancient appearance; the living is a perpetual curacy annexed to the rectory of Lymm. Some years since, three stone coffins, lying on the north side of the church, were opened, and in one was found a human skeleton of extraordinary size. The coffins bore marks of great age, and are supposed to have been the resting place of some members of the Premonstratensian establishment which existed here. The acreage of the parish is 1,747.

LYMM is a parish and village in the same hundred as Altrincham, the village being about 6 miles w. from that town, and about the same distance e. from Warrington. The parish church of St. Mary the Virgin has been re-built upon an enlarged plan, and the expense defrayed by subscriptions. The living is a rectory, in the gift of the Warburton and Leigh families. A neat chapel for Baptists has been erected by Thomas Ridgway, Esq. Lymm Hall, commandingly situated, is an ancient mansion, at one time partially moated, the bay windows of the principal entrance room having some fine specimens of stained glass. In the village is an ancient cross, the lowest steps of which are cut in the solid rock. Oughtington Hall is a handsome residence, commanding fine prospects of the country around. Near to this mansion there has been erected a large and handsome church. A Free Grammar school, which stands near the church, was endowed in 1698, by Sir George Warburton and William Domville, Esq. A parochial school was built and endowed in 1863 by Mr. Thomas Jackson. The Independents have a handsome chapel, and the Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship in the village. The parish, which includes the hamlets of HEATHLEY and SCARL, comprises 4,284 acres.

AUDLEM,
WITH BUERTON, HANKELOW, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

AUDLEM is a parish, township and village in the hundred and union of Nantwich. The village, or town, is 7 miles s. from Nantwich, the like distance n.w. from Market Drayton (Salop), and 42 s.s.w. from Manchester. The parish is purely an agricultural one, having no manufactures within its limits, or particular branch of trade. Audlem is a station on a branch of the Great Western railway, running from Nantwich to Market Drayton, and forward to Wellington, &c. The parish church, dedicated to St. James, is an imposing structure, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, and tower, with a peal of six bells. The register bears date 1557. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of Viscount Combermere. There are also places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists.

A free grammar school here has several endowments, and there are schools conducted upon the National plan. The cemetery, which was opened in 1874, covers two acres of land, and has two mortuary chapels. A grant for a market and fair was obtained in the 24th of Edward I. which, after long disuse, were some years since received. The former is now held on Thursday, and the latter in the month of July. Lord Newry, who is the principal landowner, is the lord of the manor.

BUERTON is a township in Audlem parish, union and hundred of Nantwich, 7 miles s.e. therefrom, and 2 miles s.e. from Audlem. There is a British school, and places of worship for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. The lord of the manor is Sir H. D. Broughton, Bart.

HANKELOW is a small, scattered township in Audlem parish, union, and hundred of Nantwich, 5 miles s.e. therefrom, and 1½ miles n.e. from Audlem. There is a school on the National plan and a Wesleyan chapel in the village.

POST OFFICE, AUDLEM, Harriet Blakeman, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Nantwich) at eight morning, and are despatched thereto at six night.

WITH POULTON-CUM-SPITAL, ROCK FERRY, NEW FERRY, STORETON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BEBINGTOM is an extensive parish, in the lower division of Wirral hundred, comprising the townships of HIGHER and LOWER BEBINGTOM; POULTON-CUM-SPITAL, STORETON and TRANMERE—HIGHER and LOWER BEBINGTOM villages being 4 miles s.e. from Birkenhead; situated on the line of the Chester and Birkenhead Railway. Here are situated the far famed Storeton quarries, from which an inexhaustible supply of fine white sandstone is obtained for building purposes. Many geological treasures have been discovered here, chiefly consisting of impressions in the sandstone of the footprints of long-extinct animals. In Lower Bebington was established in 1866 a free library and reading room, munificently founded by Joseph Mayer, Esq. F.S.A., of Penman's House, for the benefit of the inhabitants; the library contains over twenty-one thousand volumes, and the reading room is liberally supplied with the newspapers and periodicals of the day. The parish church of Saint Andrew is a very ancient structure, partly Norman and partly in the early decorated and later styles of English architecture, with a tower surmounted by a spire; the living is a rectory Christ church, situated at Lower Bebington, is a stone edifice, erected in 1859; the living is a perpetual curacy. There are also a Wesleyan chapel and a National school here, and at Higher Bebington there is also a National school. There is a station here on the Birkenhead and Chester line.

POULTON-CUM-SPITAL is a township in the parish of Bebington, 1 mile s. from Bebington, and about 5 miles s. from Birkenhead. There is a station here on the Chester line of railway.

ROCK FERRY is a beautiful suburb, partly in the townships of Higher Bebington and Tranmere, and in the parish of Bebington, about 1½ miles s.e. of Birkenhead and 3 miles w. from Liverpool. It contains many elegant houses and villas, the residences of gentry and Liverpool merchants. Along the river side from here to New Ferry is a good esplanade—a favourite promenade for both inhabitants and visitors. A steam boat plies between this ferry and Liverpool every half hour. There is also a station on the Birkenhead and Chester Railway not far from the ferry. The church of St. Peter is a handsome edifice of stone, in the Norman style of architecture, erected in 1842; the living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of trustees. There are also places of worship for English Presbyterians, Wesleyan and Welsh Calvinistic Methodists, Congregationalists, and Roman Catholics. The Bebington Cemetery, covering 22½ acres of ground, is situated here, and is beautifully laid out.

A short distance further on is NEW FERRY, a hamlet in the parish of Bebington and township of Lower Bebington, 3 miles s. e. from Birkenhead. It is a pleasant place, and much frequented by excursionists, but contains nothing of interest. A ferry steamer plies between here and Liverpool at short intervals during the day, passing through the Sloyne, the principal anchorage of the Mersey; the Atlantic steamers may also be seen here, as well as a guardship for the protection of the port of Liverpool; the training ships "Conway" and "Indefatigable," and the reformatory vessels "Akbar" and "Clarence" are likewise stationed in the Sloyne. St. Mark's church, erected in 1867, is in the New Chester road, the sittings in which are all free.

STORETON is a township in Bebington parish, 4½ miles s.w. by s. from Birkenhead. Here is a National school.

BIRKENHEAD,

WITH THE PARISH OF BIDSTON; THE TOWNSHIPS OF BIDSTON-CUM-FORD, CLAUGHTON-CUM-GRANGE, MORETON-CUM-LINGHAM, OXTON, POULTON-CUM-SEACOMBE, SAUGHALL MASSIE, AND TRANMERE; THE SUBURBS, VILLAGES AND HAMLETS OF BIDSTON, CLAUGHTON, GRANGE, OXTON, SEACOMBE AND TRANMERE.

BIRKENHEAD is a municipal and parliamentary borough and populous town in the hundred of Wirral and union of its name, 15 miles n.n.w. from Chester, 33 w. from Manchester, and 195 from London, seated on the western bank of the Mersey, exactly opposite to the great commercial port of Liverpool. Birkenhead has within the last few years risen from comparative obscurity to its present position, forming a striking contrast to the quiet and secluded appearance it presented a few centuries since, when under conventional government. No later than 1818, only a few straggling houses existed, and the population numbered but fifty ; now it is 82,000. The township anciently formed part of the demesnes of a priory, founded in 1150, by Hamon de Massey, Lord of Dunham, a grandson of one of the followers of the Norman Conqueror. It was erected in the reign of Edward II., who granted the entire monopoly of the ferries to the monks. The remains of the monastery are yet in a tolerable state of preservation, exhibiting some beautiful specimens of the decorative style of English architecture, which prevailed at the period of its foundation. At the dissolution, the revenues of the priory were valued at an annual rental of £102 16s. 10d., and part of the estates were soon afterwards transferred to the See of Chester, and part granted to the Worsleys of Lancashire, from whose descendants and representatives they became vested in F. R. Pryce, Esq. of the county of Flint. Birkenhead was formerly controlled by a body styled the Birkenhead Improvement Commissioners, numbering twenty-one, but is now governed by a corporation consisting of a mayor, 14 aldermen, and 42 councillors, the charter of incorporation having been granted on August 13th, 1877. Birkenhead was formed into a parliamentary borough in 1861, its boundary including the neighbouring townships of CLAUGHTON, OXTON, TRANMERE, and part of BEBBINGTON. D. MacIver, Esq. J.P. is the sitting member. The principal streets of the town are laid out with great regularity, crossing each other at right angles, and are about twenty yards in width ; but the back streets are narrow and composed of small and mean dwellings. The greater part of the larger houses are of white stone from the neighbouring quarries. Hamilton square, a beautiful quadrangle of about eight acres, is scarcely excelled by any buildings in the kingdom. In this square is a handsome bronze statue, 10ft. 5 inches high, of the late John Laird, Esq. the first M.P. for the borough, erected in 1877. The park is another great ornament to Birkenhead, and was suggested by the late Sir William Jackson, Bart. It consists of about 180 acres, seventy of which were laid out by the late Sir Joseph Paxton, in a style not surpassed by any other area of a similar kind in this country ; by the Act of Parliament authorising its formation, it is free for the use of the public for ever. Its cost was £120,000. Within the entrance gate is a fountain, erected by public subscription, to the memory of the late John Somerville Jackson, Esq. one of the pioneers of progress in Birkenhead. A piece of ground, twenty-three acres in extent, beautifully situated, looking on to the river Mersey, has been appropriated to the public as a park by the corporation, at a cost of £30,000, and is a great boon to the inhabitants of that part of the borough. The town is very conveniently situated for commercial enterprise, having communication with the entire railway system of the country. The Birkenhead, Lancashire and Cheshire Junction Railway was the earliest constructed, the first sod having been cut by Sir R. Brooke, at Norton, near Preston Brook, on 14th November, 1846, and when completed, joined the London and North-Western line at Crewe. It was subsequently connected with the Great Western Railway, which enabled the latter company to open their through route to London on 14th November, 1854. In July, 1859, the Birkenhead line was purchased by the London and North-Western and Great Western Railway Companies, and was transferred to them on the 17th August, 1860, since which period it has been worked by the joint companies. A line of railway, in length about nine miles, has also been opened to Hoylake, the terminus being at the north end of the docks. The railway bridge over the river Mersey at Runcorn, commenced by the London and North-Western Railway Company in 1863, was opened for traffic in April, 1869. The construction of this bridge shortened from 45 to 35 miles the distance by rail between the Birkenhead and the Liverpool docks, and this distance will be reduced to about 1 mile by the Mersey railway tunnel now in course of construction. The new Woodside station, in close proximity to the Woodside ferry, and which is approached by a tunnel 566 yards long running under the town, joins the existing line close to Green lane, Tranmere. There are five platforms of 550 feet in length, and the whole station building being covered by a light iron roof ; the station is managed by an amalgamated committee of the London and North-Western and the Great Western railways. The river steamers on the Mersey form a numerous and well appointed fleet of ferry boats, running at short intervals throughout the day, and those at Woodside and Seacombe all the night through as well. The boats to New Brighton afford the opportunity for a visit to the open sea ; those to Egremont open up the Liverpool district ; whilst Seacombe affords a ready access to the north side of the Great Float, where are the magnificent corn warehouses built by the dock board. Woodside ferry is convenient to the market, park and docks, and Tranmere is equally so. Rock Ferry, New Ferry and Eastham, further inland, open up a delightful country ; and the last-named is famous for its beautiful wood, where pic-nics are held in the summer months. Woodside ferry was first established in 1282, and was then worth forty shillings a year, but now 12,000,000 passengers cross yearly, and yet no life has been lost in the traffic for the last forty years. The landing stage is a fine structure, completed, we believe, in 1862 ; it consists of iron pontoons moored to the shore, and decked over to form a perfectly level promenade. The communication with the shore is by means of two ponderous iron bridges, that for foot passengers being covered with glass. At the shore end are good waiting rooms ; also an extensive promenade ; entirely sheltered from the weather. The south end of the stage, for a length of 300 feet, including one of the bridges, is appropriated to the use of the Birkenhead corporation. The 500 feet northwards and the other bridge is under the superintendence of the dock board. In connection with the latter there is also a floating bridge 678 feet in length by 30 feet in width, by means of which an easy incline for heavy traffic is maintained at all times of the tide. Birkenhead was the first town in England to have tramway cars, and tramways are now laid down through some of the principal streets to the adjoining suburbs. The Birkenhead Improvement Commissioners having resolved in November, 1843, to apply to Parliament for powers to construct docks in Wallasey Pool, bills were passed for that purpose in March, 1845. In October, 1844, the foundation stone was laid by the late Sir Philip de Malpas Grey Egerton, M.P. for South Cheshire ; and on April 5th, 1847, two docks, called the Morpeth and Egerton docks, were opened by Lord Morpeth, the Chief Commissioner of Woods and Forests. The former dock, which is appropriated to the general trade of the port, has a water area of 11 acres and 2,404 yards, and a quayage of 1,299 lineal yards ; at the east end, branching out of this dock, are two passages, 50ft. and 85ft. in width respectively, the latter of which can be used as a graving dock. The Egerton dock, at the east end of which is a passage leading into the Morpeth dock, is 3 acres and 4,011 yards in extent, with a quayage of 754 lineal yards. These were subsequently extended by the construction of other docks and a great floating harbour, the latter having been first opened on April 10th, 1851, and completed on November 1st, 1860. The Birkenhead docks have attained a world-wide reputation and are splendid specimens of engineering; one of them (the Great Float) being the largest dock in the world. They contain 165 acres of water area, and nine miles of quay space, and were designed by the late J. M. Rendel, c.e., enlarged by J. B. Hartley, c.e., and completed by G. Lister, c.e., engineer to the dock board. A general depression in commercial affairs occurring in subsequent years necessitated the transfer by sale of these magnificent works to the Mersey Dock and Harbour Board, who took possession of the same on August 8th, 1865, and finally completed their purchase on September 8th in the same year. To facilitate the rapid loading of coal into vessels, powerful hydraulic hoists and coal tips are employed. Amongst other improvements since effected has been the erection of an extensive range of corn warehouses, and on the Morpeth pier is placed a time gun, first fired on 21st September, 1867. This gun is under the rule and management of the marine department of the above-named board, and is fired every day at one p.m. Greenwich time, Sundays excepted. Near the north end of the docks is a very extensive block of lofty houses, called the dock cottages, capable of accommodating upwards of 2,000 individuals. Birkenhead has for some years been celebrated for its iron ship building yards, some of the largest vessels afloat having been built here by Messrs. Laird and other firms, whose respective establishments are most extensive and complete, enabling them to construct vessels of all sizes for every trade. The notorious confederate cruiser "Alabama" was built here in 1862, as well as a number of vessels of war for the British and other governments. In the neighbourhood of the docks are the Canada works, for the building of gigantic bridges; also the Britannia machinery works, and other similar establishments.

The township (or chapelry) of Birkenhead is extra parochial, surrounded on the land side by the parishes of Bebington, Oxton, Bidston, and Claughton. The chapel of the ancient priory was used as a church for many years, until about 1820, when Saint Mary's church—an ancient edifice of red sandstone—was erected, in a similar style of architecture to that of the ancient priory, by Mr. Pryce. This gentleman sold the greater part of the township and the adjacent one of Claughton-cum-Grange to William Jackson, Esq. Simeon's trustees are patrons of the living. Holy Trinity church, Price street, is a stone edifice in the Norman style of architecture, with a tower highly decorated. Saint Anne's church, St. Anne street, is of red sandstone, the style being Gothic of the middle ages. Saint John's, Grange lane, is a handsome structure, also of red sandstone, with tower and spire, the architecture being early English. Saint James's church is a stone edifice, in the early English style of architecture, situated in Laird street. Saint Paul's church, in Argyle street, and Saint Peter's church, in Conway street, are both plain but commodious buildings. There are numerous places of worship for the various denominations of Protestant dissenters, and three Roman Catholic chapels.

CHEADLE,

STOCKPORT-ETCHELLS, WITH GATLEY, LONG LANE AND HEALD GREEN, NORTHEN-ETCHELLS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CHEADLE is a parish, in the county of Chester, comprising the townships of CHEADLE-BULKELEY, CHEADLE-MOSELEY and HANFORTH-WITH-BOSDEN, in the hundred of Macclesfield; the village of Cheadle being situated 7 miles s. from Manchester, and 3 w. from Stockport. In 1806 a portion of the manor was conveyed to the Worthington family, of Ringwood, but in 1875 was conveyed to the late Sir James Watts, Kt. and is now in the possession of his son, James Watts, Esq. who holds a court on the 17th October, for Cheadle-Bulkeley, and one is also held by Lloyd Hesketh Bamford Hesketh, Esq., on the 24th of June as lord of the manor for Cheadle-Hulme and Cheadle-Moseley. Upon the Mersey are some corn mills, and near the village are works for calico printing. Two lines of railroad have been constructed and are now in operation; one, the Stockport, Altringham and Timperley Junction, passes under the Didsbury road, close by Abney Hall; the other, the Stockport and Cheadle branch of the London and North-Western line, runs through the village and joins the other line at Northenden station, 2 miles s.s.w. from Cheadle. The parish church of St. Mary, erected about 1524, consists of a nave, aisles, and chancel, with a tower, the latter containing a peal of bells. The monuments are but few in number; those only worthy of notice are to the Brereton and Bulkeley families—the latter much dilapidated—the several dates being 1556, 1673 and 1678. In the year 1870 a most elegant monument of Aberdeen granite was erected to the memory of the late Mr. John Jennison, of Belle Vue, Manchester. The living is a rectory. The church has recently been renovated, the improvements effected comprising the reseating of the church, the removal of the west gallery, erection of new organ, &c. all of which were carried out under the direction of Mr. Street, the eminent architect. There is a chapel for the Independents, and one for the Wesleyan Methodists, both handsome edifices, in the Gothic style of architecture. There is also a chapel for the Primitive Methodists. In the village is a National school, and also an infants' school at Cheadle Heath. A school was founded at Cheadle-Hulme, by John Robinson, for the education of eight children; and John Gatley, of Manchester, left £100 to the establishment, which now gives instruction to about forty children of Cheadle-Bulkeley, Cheadle-Hulme, and Cheadle-Moseley. At Cheadle Heath is an old disused school and residence, of which the rector and churchwardens for the time being are trustees. It is let, and yields a rental of £10, which is applied to the education of ten children in the National school. Near the village is situated the Convalescent Hospital, in connection with the Manchester Royal Infirmary, erected at the expense of the late Robert Barnes, Esq., of Fallow-field. The country, although level, is very pleasant, and there are some handsome residences ornamental to the scenery. A Literary Institution was opened in the village in August, 1877. It is a neat and commodious building, containing newsroom, library, and public hall, and was erected by public subscription, at a cost of about £2,000. The parish of Cheadle contains 6,275 acres.

STOCKPORT-ETCHELLS, comprising the village of GATLEY, and the hamlets of LONG LANE and HEALD GREEN, is a township in the parish of Stockport and hundred of Macclesfield, four miles w.s.w. from Stockport, and on the road between Cheadle and Northenden. T. W. Tatton, Esq., is lord of the manor, and by his representatives holds a court baron, but the chief rents being small are therefore deemed merely nominal. A new church dedicated to St. James the Apostle, a plain brick structure, has recently been erected at Gatley. There is also a chapel each for Independents and Primitive Methodists, and also National and British schools.

AT LONG LANE, in this township, is the Manchester Royal Lunatic Hospital, a spacious and handsome structure in the Elizabethan style of architecture. It presents a frontage of 300 feet, with a wing at each end, and is capable of accommodating 150 patients; there are several cottages for the use of the officers and servants; and connected with the building is a farm of about 50 acres. The building was opened on the 10th December, 1849, and the cost of erection was £15,000.

GATLEY is a village in the township of Stockport-Etchells, about one mile w. from Cheadle, and four w. from Stockport.

NORTHEX, or Northenden, is a parish of near 4,000 acres, also in the county of Chester, comprising the township of NORTHENDEN, 1,434 acres, and that of ETCHELLS, 2,282 acres, and a small portion of Baguley. The village of Northenden, pleasant and rural, is nearly five miles w. from Stockport, and about 2½ s.s.w. from Cheadle. The parish church of St. Wilfred, which has recently undergone extensive restoration, consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower. The roof is supported by five pointed arches, springing from as many octagonal columns. There are two chapels at the end of the aisles, belonging to the Tattons, and several monumental memorials of that family. The living is a rectory, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Chester. The Wesleyan Methodists have also a chapel. A new road has been made, supplying a want very much needed; it commences at the west end of the village, crosses the Mersey by a strong iron bridge, and is carried on into Withington, where it terminates near the church.

CHESTER is a very ancient and respectable city, the see of a bishop, a port and county of itself, and is situated on the river Dee, in the hundred of Broxton. It is by the nearest route 182 miles N. W. of London, 38 S. W. from Manchester (52 by rail), 12 miles N. by E. from Wrexham, 18 miles S. E. from Holywell, and 14 S. E. from Flint. The situation of the city and neighbourhood is very good, and owing to the streets being much above the level of the river Dee, the city is remarkably healthy and well placed as to sanitary arrangements. Although in size and population it cannot rank with many other cities of England, yet in point of antiquity, local interest, and objects claiming attention from the curious and refined, it is parallel with most, and superior to many. It is difficult to decide when the city was first founded, as the following will show. Webb, in "King's Vale Royal," says—"The first name that I find the city to have been supposed to have borne was Neomagus; and this they derive from Magus, the son of Samothes, who was the first planter of inhabitants in this isle after Noah's flood, which now containeth England, Ireland and Wales, and of him was called Samothea; and this Samothes was son of Japhet, the third son of Noah; and of this Magus, who first builded a city even in this place or near unto it, as it is supposed, the same was called Neomagus. This conjecture I find observed out of the learned Knight, Sir Thomas Elliot, who saith directly that Neomagus stood where Chester now standeth, in I. vol. 'Chronic de Descriptione Britan,' p. 2." This, with many other equally absurd traditions, must be disposed of entirely. Randulphus, the monk of St. Werburgh, and author of the "Polychronicon," tells us that Leon Gaure, a giant, first built the city in a rude and disorderly fashion, which was afterwards beautified by Leir, King of Britain. This is regarded by many as the most probable, but the Romans must be credited with its permanent foundation. Having subdued the neighbouring tribes, they erected the town into a garrison about the year A.D. 61, and the celebrated XXth legion became the occupants of the "station," which they did not vacate until the Imperial army was called away to the Continent to engage in the great wars then rife against the Roman power. Of their work ample remains exist in various portions of the city, and year by year further examples are discovered, showing how much the Britons must have been benefited by the Roman arts and manners. The more notable remains are the baths and hypocaust in Bridge street, beside many altars and other curiosities, which have been preserved in the various public and private collections. The portions of the city walls that have stood since that time are mainly near the North gate, where the Roman fosse also existed before the canal was formed. Immediately the Roman army vacated England, the Picts and Scots harassed the Britons, and for many years continual wars were carried on in which Chester figured prominently as a safeguard to the neighbourhood. In 607 Ethelfred, King of Northumberland, defeated the Britons under its walls, and captured it eventually, but in 613 the Britons had possession again, and in that year Cadwan was at Chester elected and crowned their king. Egbert having conquered all the other kings, the city was annexed to his kingdom in 828. The Danes besieged the city in 895, doing considerable damage, but after various encounters King Alfred had the satisfaction to dislodge them from the fortress, at that time of great strength. The city walls having decayed, Ethelfleda "inclosed the city with new walls and made it nigh two such as it was before, so that the Castle that was sometime by the water without the walls, is now in the town within the walls." Such is the praise that one old chronicler gives to Ethelfleda, who is also credited, with the founding of several other towns and castles in the county. She is described as being a good princess, and patron of the church. About the year 971, Edgar visited Chester, and during his stay made a league with the neighbouring kings, six of whom he caused to row him from his palace up the Dee to St. John's Church, and from thence back to his palace, which stood in Handbridge, as a mark of their subordination. The site is now a field which contains a cave still called "Edgar's Cave;" it bears a Roman figure of Pallas (Minerva), carved in the solid rock. This goddess was supposed to guard the road and the ford that existed across the river immediately past the cave's mouth.

Until the Conquest, Chester was the scene of conflict, and as being the principal port in the neighbourhood, its trade was good in proportion, and the Danish pirates were great enemies to its shipping. In the death of Harold, the last Saxon King was dethroned, and William Duke of Normandy became possessed of the country. He gave the city and neighbourhood to Gherbod, a noble Fleming, with the title of earl, but being called away to Flanders upon business connected with his possessions there, he fell into the hands of his enemy, who imprisoned him where he died without enjoying the earldom. The honour was next bestowed upon Hugh Lupus, the son of Richard, Earl of Avranches of Normandy, by Emma the sister of William, with power equal to that of the king himself, or as the charter bears;—"Tam liberè ad gladium, sicut ipse Rex tenebat Angliam ad coronam." The sword which gave him such power still remains in the British Museum, and bears the inscription "Hugo Comes Cestriæ" upon the blade. He was invested about the year 1070, by his uncle, at Chester. The earldom continued in this family until the death of John Scot, 7th Norman Earl, whose death, in 1237, is attributed to the hand of his wife Helen, by poison. The earldom was then annexed to the Crown, and since that time the title has been borne by the eldest son of the sovereign. Although the Earls of Chester were such renowned warriors and had such powers, their possessions and the city received continual attacks from the Welsh, who on many occasions laid waste the district, and carried fire to the very gates of the city.

The government of Chester was under the earls, who appointed constables and other officers, but so early as 1247, if not before, a municipality existed. Sir Walter Lynett was mayor in that year, an office which he held for several consecutive years, as did his successors, but eventually the change each year became general. The sheriffs, however, were elected annually and were two in number, one as the direct representative of the sovereign. The corporation consisted of the mayor, two sheriffs, twenty-four aldermen, and forty common councilmen, and from these were chosen the mayor and two sheriffs (as above named), the recorder, two coroners, two treasurers, and murengers, and two leave-lookers, but the sheriffs were not required to belong to the body, although it was usual to elect one, and sometimes both, therefrom. The ancient charters are numerous. Randal, Earl of Chester, granted to all his citizens of Chester their guild mercatory, with all its liberties and free customs, which they before time had had under his ancestors, any person disturbing the said guild to forfeit £10 to the Earl. Most of the kings of England granted certain privileges to the city, by charter, Richard II. erecting it into a principality; but it was Henry VII. who erected the city into a city and county of itself. His charter bears date 6th of April, in his 21st year (1505), and it gives power to elect the mayor and corporation in the manner above named, also grants the fishery of the Dee, a large revenue coming from this, and all its former privileges, and the mayor, recorder and all the aldermen who had passed through the civic chair were constituted keepers of the peace. Under it none but freemen of the city could sell within the city bounds, except at the two great annual fairs, but the freemen charging such excessive prices for provisions, the city authorities issued in 1577 an order granting the country butchers permission to sell on the market days, and in the following year to the bakers likewise. In 1541 Henry VIII. made the city into a sanctuary, but in the year following, on the petition of the citizens, it was removed to Stafford. Under the Commonwealth, in September, 1659, the charter of 1505 was voted out of power, but in the following February it was restored.

The commercial history dates from the Conquest, when William made it one of his ports, and received custom upon all goods landed on the wharf. The port of Chester was in its highest state when Liverpool was but a village, in the middle ages, but as the river was neglected the traders took the necessary step of using the better river, the Mersey, and so Liverpool became the principal port. The staple trades and manufactures were gloves, tanning, tobacco, tobacco pipes and lead. Shipbuilding was also greatly carried on until the river became so silted that no vessels of large burden could reach the port. Previous to 1733 the mouth of the Dee extended to a point near Chester, but in that year the course of the river was changed and many acres of land reclaimed; the water was turned into the new channel in April, 1737. Chester was, in Tudor and Stuart ages, much used as a port to ship the soldiers to Ireland, whilst cheese, salt, hides, wool and other goods were exported; the principal import being Irish linen, which began about 1730, the sales taking place in the Linen Hall, but this trade has for many years been abandoned. The present trades are boot, tobacco and snuff manufactures, lead and shot works, and large flour mills, whilst the various nurseries and market gardens supply labour to many inhabitants.

The Market Hall is situate in Northgate street, adjoining the Town Hall, and consists of various shops and open stalls; it was erected on the site of Messrs. Dixon & Co.'s Bank and the White Lion Hotel, which was the principal hostelry in the coaching days. The new Market Hall was opened on March 10th, 1863, the wedding-day of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The market days are Wednesday and Saturday, the latter the principal one, when provisions and vegetables are well supplied. The corn market is held every Saturday in the Corn Exchange, Eastgate street, and is well attended. This Exchange was erected on the site of the old Manchester Hall, and contains various offices and chambers permanently let to business men. The fairs are held once a month and consist of horse and cattle fairs; cheese fairs are also held in the Linen Hall, and a considerable amount of business in this branch is done, but since the introduction of American cheese the high prices that Cheshire cheese commanded are now very much lower. The following days have been appointed for holding fairs for the sale of horses, horned cattle, sheep and pigs during the year 1882:—January 26th, February 23rd, March 30th, April 27th, May 25th, July 5th, August 3rd, September 7th, October 10th, November 9th, and December 14th; and for the sale of cheese, February 22nd, April 26th, July 4th, September 6th, October 9th, and November 8th.

The form of the city is identical with, and the walls stand upon, the Roman plan, excepting that portion near the Castle. The four principal streets face the four cardinal points and meet in the centre, which is called the High Cross, where once existed the Cross, but it was pulled down during the civil wars. From this point could be seen the four principal gates, which in the middle ages were held under lease from the Crown by various families, together with the tolls payable by the people entering the city. The Northgate was the property of the city, and used as a prison, and in it existed the cell called "Little Ease," wherein the prisoner was tortured without a chance of stirring. The old gate was taken down in 1808, and a new one erected at the expense of Earl Grosvenor. The Eastgate is the principal entrance gate, and until the middle of last century the Roman arches remained, but in 1768 the present arch was erected at the expense of Lord Richard Grosvenor. The sergeanty of this was given to Hervicus de Bradford by Edward I., about 1270, as a compensation for the manor of Bradford, which he had ceded to Vale Royal Abbey. The Trussells, the Veres, Earls of Oxford and the Crewe's became the respective owners of the tolls, which were released to the Corporation by John Crewe, Esq., in 1662, on suitable terms. The Bridgegate is an erection at the expense of the Corporation in 1782, and is in every way equal to its predecessor, which was a gate with two round towers, upon one of which was erected, in 1601, an octagonal tower from which to supply the city with water. The custody of this gate belonged to various families, particularly the Rabys and Troutbecks, and the Earls of Shrewsbury afterwards held it as representatives of the latter. The Dee Bridge, originally of wood, was twice built, having been swept away by the floods, but in the thirteenth century it was built of stone, and has received repairs since, particularly the south end, which was re-built about 1550. The bridge was also widened to meet the requirements of the increased traffic, in 1826. The Dee Mills, adjacent, were founded, together with the causeway, by Hugh Lupus, and afterwards became the property of the Earls of the royal line, who leased them to various inhabitants. In the seventeenth century it was decided to destroy the mills and causeway, to make the river into a harbour, which, however, was not carried out. The mills after various changes became the property of private persons, and are now carried on by Mr. Johnson. The Watergate was erected in 1783 by the Corporation, on the site of an earlier one, which was under the sergeanty of the Earls of Derby. Through it came all the goods landed from the shipping at the port of Chester outside the walls, and the sergeant of this gate executed the mayor's processes on the Dee.

The city walls present a beautiful and healthy promenade to the citizens, and are very much admired by visitors, as much for their novelty as the splendid views obtainable from the various towers and mounts. These towers are of much interest, especially the Phoenix, or King Charles's Tower, which unfortunate monarch stood upon its summit and saw his army defeated upon Rowton Moor (September 24, 1645). The new, or Water Tower, was erected at the city's expense in 1822, costing £100, by John Helpstone, a mason, and when built was at high tide surrounded by the river, and the vessels came close to it; it is now, however, many yards from the river, owing to the land having been reclaimed, as before mentioned.

The prevailing architecture of the city is half-timber Gothic, for which Chester is well known. The numerous examples warrant the architectural value that the city has deservedly maintained for many years. The earliest buildings bearing date were erected in 1577, but doubtless many were built before that time. The old palace of the Earls of Derby was erected in 1591, and was their city residence. It is now occupied by cottagers, and stands in a court of Watergate street. God's Providence house, erected 1652, and Bishop Lloyd's house, erected in 1695, in Watergate street, are the best examples of the 17th century erections. The former has a motto—"God's providence is mine inheritance" carved upon the row-beam, and its origin is said to be the thankfulness of the owner, this being the only house not visited by the plague. Bishop Lloyd's house bears his arms and an inscription. The panels are striking instances of the inventive taste of those times, and bear representations of Abraham offering up Isaac, Cain slaying Abel, the temptation of Eve, Susannah and the elders, also the resurrection of Christ, with many other curious devices and emblems. Bridge street is rich in old examples, which date from the latter part of the 16th century, whilst Northgate street presents the inconvenience the city endures by the narrowness of the streets. Improvements have been in contemplation for several years, and, when widened, this street will no doubt become one of the most fashionable. Eastgate street has within the last thirty years undergone a remarkable change, the old fronts being removed, and new shops erected to keep pace with the prevailing fashion, and this street is now the best centre for business. The Rows, peculiar to Chester, are very interesting, and form fashionable retreats from the elements. Their origin cannot be defined, but it is supposed to have arisen in consequence of the numerous invasions by the Welsh, or they may have been found to give better accommodation to foot passengers, the streets being unpaved until the sixteenth century.

The Castle is an erection of the 11th century, upon the site of an earlier one, and ascribed to William the Conqueror. It is situated near the southwest of the city walls, upon a natural mound, and during all the disturbances was of the greatest use; but in 1789 most of the old buildings were taken down, and the present castle was erected under the direction of Thomas Harrison. The buildings contain the Shire Hall, Nisi Prius Court, County Gaol, and the military barracks. The Crown Court is large and beautiful, semicircular in plan; the outer circle contains a row of twelve columns, of Ionic order, from which springs a domed roof, panelled and decorated, the court being lighted by a cupola. The new Nisi Prius Court has recently been erected, and is 57½ feet long and 44 feet wide. There is ample accommodation for the legal gentlemen, and a gallery and seats for the public. Behind the bench are retiring rooms for the judge, jury, and counsel, and a capital library is arranged in the long corridor connecting the two courts together. The cost was upwards of £14,000, and the buildings were erected by Mr. Samuel Warburton, of Manchester, from the designs of Mr. Thomas M. Lockwood, architect, of Chester. There are several large rooms connected with the courts, which are used by the magistrates during the county sessions. The prison is now used as a military gaol, and is under the superintendence of Lieut. Colonel H. Wareing. The gaol for the county is now at Knutsford, this being used for military purposes alone. The cell accommodation is superior to many other prisons, and within a few years various workrooms have been added. The military barracks are now occupied by the Cheshire Regiment, formerly known as the 22nd, and the armoury is capable of storing many thousand pieces. The powder magazine is situate in Julius Agricola's tower, which is the only Norman portion remaining of the ancient castle. It contains a small chapel, wherein King James II. when visiting the city, heard mass. The castle yard is of immense size, and is used by the garrison and volunteers as a parade and drilling ground.

The Roodee contains about 90 acres, and is let by the Corporation as a pasture ground, and it is largely used now, as formerly, for recreation purposes. The May races, the training of the county militia and the Earl of Chester's yeomanry cavalry, and the autumn sports are also held here. The Grosvenor bridge is adjacent to the Roodee, and was built to obtain better access to Holyhead and other Welsh towns. Mr. Thomas Harrison was the architect. It is the largest stone span in the world. The width of the arch is 200 feet; height of arch from springing line, 40 feet, the top of parapet wall being 66 feet 6 inches above the river at low-water mark. The Queen opened the bridge in 1832, whilst visiting the House of Grosvenor at Eaton Hall.

The Town Hall is an imposing edifice situate in Northgate street, standing upon the site of the old Exchange, burnt down in 1862. It is built in the Gothic style, and the stone obtained from the Stourton and Manley quarries presents a beautiful contrast to the half timber of the neighbouring buildings. The roofs are covered with coloured slates, and surmounted by an ornamental ridge cresting of iron, the parapet being moulded and pierced; at either ends this is stopped by octagonal turrets. The tower is central and about 160 feet high, from which views of Liverpool and the surrounding counties can be obtained. The principal floor is gained by a large flight of steps, which lead to an entrance hall, from which access to the various offices is gained. The spacious central waiting hall gives access to the sessions court on the right, and the assembly room is situated to the left. The latter is about 77 feet long and 40 feet wide, with a large semicircular stage for performers and speakers, and is splendidly adapted for its various requirements. The mayor's parlour and council chamber on the first floor are reached by means of a large circular stone staircase, lighted by windows filled with stained glass, representing the Norman Earls of Chester. The council chamber is beautifully fitted up, and contains several old views and plans of the city. The basement is occupied by the police authorities, hall-keeper's residence, and other purposes. The building was opened on October 15, 1869, by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales during the mayoralty of Thomas Gibbons Frost, Esq., who received the order of knighthood in consequence. Sir T. G. Frost again fills the civic chair this year (1883). The cost of the whole building and furniture exceeded £30,000; Messrs. Lanyon, Lynn, and Lanyon, of Belfast, were the architects.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.—The see of Chester was founded by King Henry VIII. in 1541, who endowed it with a portion of the revenue of the abbey, which was made the Cathedral. To detail its history would require more space than is at our command, but it may be mentioned that Peter, Bishop of Lichfield erected the collegiate Church of St. John into a cathedral in 1075, but after his death Robert de Limesie removed it to Coventry. Chester is one of the few cities in the world that have two cathedrals, the others being Rome, London, and Dublin. The Cathedral Church of Christ and the Blessed Virgin Mary was founded by Wulfhere A.D. 660, who built the church and abbey adjacent to an older church dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. Edgar is said to have endowed it in 858 with several houses in Chester and about nine advowsons in the county. Shortly after, in 875, the body of St. Werburgh, the daughter of Wulfhere, was removed from Hanbury to Chester, and enshrined, the church bearing that name until the dissolution. About 1057, Leofric, Earl of Mercia, repaired and enlarged the abbey, and in 1093 Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester, again enlarged it, and by consent of William Rufus, a body of regular canons of the Benedictine order was instituted. Richard, the chaplain of the Archbishop of Canterbury, was the first abbot. The Norman Church was almost demolished about 1452, and from that time many alterations have been made in the several styles, ranging from early English to late perpendicular. The Cathedral consists of nave with clerestory, choir, transepts with central tower, aisles to nave and south transept, and lady's chapel. The various dimensions are as follows:—External length 367 feet; Internal length 349 feet; the nave 156 feet long, 75 feet wide, including aisles; the choir, 137 feet long, 42 feet wide; S. Mary's, or Lady's chapel, 58 feet long, 25 feet wide; South transept (late St. Oswald's church) 80 feet long, 80 feet wide. The building has undergone a thorough restoration, with the exception of the south transept, at a cost of about £90,000; there has also been much work paid for by benevolent citizens and inhabitants of the county. The organ screen and the choir aisle gates were presented by the Duke of Westminster, the choir roof and other works by the late Robert Platt, Esq., of Dunham Hall, the pulpit by the Freemasons of Cheshire, whilst the Free-masons of Lancashire contributed to the restoration of the Sedilia. The cost of the apse at the east end of south aisle of the choir and the mosaics was defrayed as a memorial to the late Thomas Brassey, Esq., and his wife, by their sons. The lectern was given by the late Miss Potts, the holy table, ornamented by various woods from Palestine and other Eastern countries, by the Dean, whilst other gentlemen have made various gifts. The remains of the Abbey of St. Werburgh consist chiefly of the cloisters, refectory, abbot's cellar or crypt, chapter house & vestibule. The vestibule of the chapter house is the most beautiful portion of the lesser buildings, and was erected in the early English period. In it lie the remains of several of the Norman Earls of Chester. The chapter house is a noble apartment, and contains some good types of caps and columns; it is well lighted, and contains a good collection of books and other curiosities found upon the Cathedral close. The refectory is an excellent specimen of early English architecture, and contains a stone pulpit, with the stairs, from whence the daily reading was delivered by the monk during the dinner of the other brethren. The windows are lofty and of perfect proportion. This was for many generations used as the King's school, until the erection of the new schools. The abbot's cellar, or crypt, is the oldest portion of the buildings, and is late Norman; the groined roof springs from a row of dwarf pillars, and is beautifully preserved. The cloisters are very much decayed, excepting the south one, which has been re-built. In it is a row of arched recesses wherein, it is supposed, some of the abbots were buried. The other remains are not of much interest, but it is not out of place to mention here the abbey gateway, which now stands entirely severed from the abbey apartments. The gateway was newly erected about 1590, and although now containing little interest, has at one time been the site of much holiday making, the Chester fairs and mystery plays having been held before its gates in Northgate street. With the exception of the groined roof, with ornamental and sculptured bosses, the gateway possesses no features worthy of mention, owing to the porous nature of the stone, which is much decayed on the external face.

St. Oswald's church was until recently the south transept of the Cathedral. It is said to be the oldest church in the city, having been erected on the site of an early Roman church dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The conventional church was afterwards added to the parish church. This was used as such until about the thirteenth century, when Simon de Albo Monasterio, the abbot, endeavoured to disturb the parishioners, but they would not accede to his request. Simon Ripley, in 1480, completed the work that was begun by the latter. After various centuries had been spent in disputes, the parishioners were left undisturbed. By very recent arrangements this right has been given up, and with the sum granted it is the intention of the parishioners to complete the church of St. Thomas, which was erected in 1869, but for want of funds, only a portion was finished. When complete it will be one of the finest modern churches in the neighbourhood; it is being built under the direction of J. O. Scott, Esq., of London. The Rev. W. H. L. Cogswell, M.A., is the vicar, and the living is under the patronage of the Dean and Chapter, and valued at £300. The population of the parish (which extends to a considerable distance) is about 5,072.

St. John's church is said to date from the year 689, but various authorities give the period as 912. It was repaired in 1057 by Leofric, Earl of Mercia, and its endowments considerably enlarged. During several periods in the earlier history of the Church, it was the cathedral church of the diocese, but it soon returned to its former collegiate establishment. The picturesque ruins were formed by the fall of the central tower, and the church was considerably shortened by the parishioners, who cut these off and allowed them to decay. The living is valued at £287, and is in the gift of the Duke of Westminster. The Rev. S. C. Scott, M.A., being the vicar. Population, about 8,550.

St. Mary's church was given by Randal, Earl of Chester, to the abbey of St. Werburgh. It has at various times been damaged, and in 1660 the chapel of the Troutbecks fell down and destroyed many of the fine monuments it contained. The living is a rectory, with the chapelry of Upton attached, value at £470, the patron being the Duke of Westminster. The Rev. Henry Grantham is rector.

Holy Trinity church is situated in Watergate street, and stands upon the exact spot where the old church existed, the latter being so decayed that it was decided to erect a new one. This was commenced in 1863, the foundation stone being laid by Mr. C. T. W. Parry, on the 1st November in that year, and was consecrated 2nd February, 1869. Messrs. Kelly and Edwards, of Chester, were the architects; the style is early decorated, and the church consists of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, and a lofty tower, the latter being visible for a great distance. The population of the parish is about 4,000; the Earl of Derby is patron, the Rev. Edward Marston, M.A. is rector, and the living is valued at £280.

St. Peter's church stands upon the reputed site where the Roman praetorium stood, and dates from a period anterior to the Conquest. The old Pentice Court was adjacent to this building, and was taken down in 1803. The Bishop is patron. The living, a rectory, value £400, is held by the Rev. J. H. Acheson, M.A. The other parish churches are Christ church, erected in 1843, St. Bridget's-with-St. Martin, Little St. John, St. Michael's-with-St.

Olave's, and St. Paul's. There are licensed rooms and other buildings connected with the parish churches.

The various denominations have chapels and meeting houses as follows:—Wesleyan Methodists in St. John street and City road; Congregational in Queen street, Upper Northgate street, Handbridge and Boughton; English Presbyterians in Newgate street and City road; Primitive Methodists in George street; Welsh Independents in Albion street; Welsh Calvinistic in St. John street. The Baptists, Unitarians, Methodist New Connexion, the Brethren, and Society of Friends have places of worship in various parts of the city. The Roman Catholics have places of worship in the Grosvenor Park entrance and the Grosvenor road.

The King's school, situated in Northgate street, near the Cathedral, was founded by King Henry VIII. in 1541, and the government was reorganised in 1873. The school buildings were erected in 1877, under the direction of Arthur W. Bloomfield, Esq., of London, at a cost of £20,000; there is accommodation for 300 pupils, who are divided into senior and junior departments. The present head master is the Rev. George Preston, M.A. late fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge, who is assisted by an efficient staff of under masters.

The Blue Coat Hospital, situate in Upper Northgate street, was founded under the auspices of Bishop Stratford, in the year 1700, for the purpose of "teaching poor boys to read and write and cast accounts, and to repeat and understand the Church catechism." Free education is provided for one hundred boys between the ages of 10 and 14 years, of whom thirty-six are boarded and clothed. The boarders wear a picturesque dress of the period of the foundation, and are called the Blue Coat boys, the day boarders being only distinguished by a green cap. Admission to the Green Cap department can only be obtained on the nomination of a benefactor, benefactress, or annual subscriber. At the age of 12 Green Cap boys are eligible to the Blue Coat department, special weight being attached by the governors to the conduct and attendance of the candidates during their probationary period as Green Caps. Four special scholarships (£500 each) have up to this time been founded in memory of deceased patrons, whose representatives have the privilege of nominating directly to the Blue Coat department, thus dispensing with the probationary passage through the Green Cap department. The funds are principally derived from investments and voluntary contributions.

The Diocesan Training College is situated on the Park-road, and was erected in 1842. The style is Elizabethan, and the arrangement of the building is well considered. The students are taught the mechanical branches, and a blacksmith's forge, steam engines, lathes, and printing presses are at their disposal to occupy their leisure hours. The Bishop of Chester is president of the institution. There are many other schools, both public and private, that add much to the scholastic arrangements and accommodation of the city.

The hotels of Chester are numerous and well-established. The Grosvenor Hotel is a modern erection, and was built by the late Marquis of Westminster; it is a noble edifice, and presents an imposing facade to the street; the roof is level with the street, and is supported by large granite columns. The style of architecture is half-timber Gothic. The principal commercial hotels are the Blossoms, in Foregate street, and the Green Dragon, in Eastgate street, whilst the many other hotels and commercial rooms afford good accommodation for business men.

The Queen Hotel is adjacent to the general railway station, and was erected in 1860 and enlarged in 1861, at a cost of about £20,000. It is much frequented by the travelling public, and contains many spacious apartments, whilst a covered passage from the platform admits of direct access from the station. The statue of Her Majesty was sculptured by Rossiter and presented by the chairman of the company. This hotel was the scene of the largest fire in Chester (excepting, perhaps, that of the old Exchange), the new wing and the lower storey being the only portions that escaped. This fire occurred on November 25, 1861, and the damage was estimated at £10,000.

The Infirmary is situated on the western side of the city, and adjacent to the city walls. This excellent institution was founded in 1755 by Dr. Stratford, and is supported by contributions. The present building was erected in 1761, and another wing, entirely detached, was built in 1867-8 to accommodate the patients suffering from small-pox and other contagious cases. The grounds are beautifully situated, and owing to the aspect the views from the building are splendid, and embrace the valley of the Dee, whilst the Welsh mountains form the background.

The Grosvenor Park is situate near the City road, and is a delightful source of recreation. The views from the park are considerable, and in the extreme distance can be seen the Cheshire hills, capped by Beeston Castle, and the Welsh mountains, whilst the meadows of the Dee can be overlooked for a considerable distance. This park was opened in 1867, and was presented to the city by Richard, second Marquis of Westminster, whose monument stands in a prominent part, surrounded by seats and guarded by two pieces of cannon, taken during the Russian war.

The river Dee affords good boating, and during the season many gentlemen from Liverpool and Manchester are to be seen on its waters, whilst many tourists are well acquainted with its beauty.

CHRISTLETON is a parish, comprising the townships of CHRISTLETON, COTTON-ABBOYS, COTTON-EDMUND, LITTLETON, and ROWTON, in the lower division of the hundred of Broxton; the township and village are about 2 miles E. of Chester.
